“ My Grandfather was a notorious man among his neighbors, friends, and family. I remember being a little girl and walking to the post office with him on a regular basis, this is something he did everyday and he spoke to everyone that he could. He taught me how to make a sling shot and shoot at random things in his back yard. I remember him playing his record player for him me and he would dance with me (of course no one witnessed this) it was just our thing. I will always remember how he smelt of after shave and Sea-Breeze. This is a smell that I love to this day. He didn't sugar coat anything and told you just like it is. He will be extremely missed. Looking back I wish I would have had a better relationship with him, but that is something I will have to live with. PaPaw I love you very much and I am grateful you are not in pain anymore, you are finally free.
